Delaware State Police

Eighteen years ago, this month, I started my journey to become a Delaware State Trooper. I recall during the first few days at the academy there was a drill instructor who asked us, "Why? Why are you here?" For the recruits, the answer, in one way or another was to help people. Although now, true crime TV and mass media perspectives may paint a picture of law enforcement with the focus being on criminal apprehension, large scale drug investigations and other negative incidents that are the exception to the rule; yet the underlying driving force still remains the desire to help people.
